Raife Remington and his friend were strolling along, chatting about their old college days, idly smoking cigarettes when they came up behind two well yet neatly dressed girls. One about twenty in a white pique coat and skirt with large pearl buttons cut smartly. The other about a couple of years her junior who was fair haired, very beautiful, and led a little black pom by a silver chain. Was in dead black with a neat close fitting hat with a turquoise blue band. Snookie duly examined by his dainty little mistress was declared to have suffered no damage. Therefore after Raife had asked permission to walk with them as they were going in the same direction they all four found themselves chatting merrily as they strolled along. Raife at the side of the pom's mistress and his chum with her foreign looking companion. About William Le Queux the author. He was also a diplomat, honorary consul for San Marino, a traveller in Europe, the Balkans, and North Africa. A flying buff who officiated at the first British Air Meeting at Doncaster in 1909 and a wireless pioneer who broadcast music from his own station long before radio was generally available. His claims regarding his own abilities and exploits however were usually exaggerated. Le Queux mainly wrote in the genres of mystery, thriller, and espionage particularly in the years leading up to World War I when his partnership with British publishing magnate Lord Northcliffe led to the serialised publication and intensive publicising including actors dressed as German soldiers walking along Regent Street of pulp fiction, spy stories, and invasion literature such as The Invasion of 1910, The Poisoned Bullet, and Spies of the Kaiser.
